Americans In Japan Said Going in for Native Sport

TOKYO.—From one end of Japan to the other, Americans are going native in sports. Soldiers turn up as sumo and archery champions, women employes as court dancers and judo experts. And they're beating the Japanese at these century old sports and arts.

Air force Lt. Orville W. Elmore is sumo champion of Hokkaido, Japan's northern island. Orville, a wispy 5 foot 10 inch man weighing 167 pounds, won his ornate woven gold and straw belt by throwing 295 pound Chinoyama (Man Mountain), a 6 foot, 5 incher.

Judo, the more scientific form of wrestling and self-protection, has attracted thousands of Americans. During the last two years, 580 have practiced at world judo headquarters in Tokyo. Others have joined judo clubs at army and air force installations. Eighty-two Americans have gained the first degree black belt and one has won the fifth. Even the first, the lowest of the degrees, is a mark of distinction.

One of the better American women judoists is Miss Ruth B. Gardner of Chicago. Her instructor is a Charlie Chan type of fellow with a long, thin gray beard.

Sgt. James W. Curtis of the 5th air force in Nagoya, and Lt. Ben H. Hazar of Los Angeles, one of Gen. MacArthur's intelligence officers, are both studying Japanese fencing. They have acquired cumbersome old Japanese fencing costumes.

June 17, 1775, 174 years ago, our forefathers fought a great battle for freedom and opportunity at Bunker Hill. Each one of you realizes that to maintain the freedom and opportunity for which they fought you must be ever vigilant in doing your share. One of the country's greatest assets is a sound economy which you can help to uphold. Your government is providing the opportunity through the U. S. Savings Bonds programs. Famed Indian Landmark Gets New Niche at River Falls

HOLCOMBE, WIS. — The Holcombe Indian, an eight-foot tall wooden figure that has been a familiar sight to river men since 1876, will continue his vigil from a special niche in the hydroelectric dam being constructed here.

The figure was carved by a former sailor, Luke Lyons, from a carefully selected white pine log cut by Jere Juvette near here 73 years ago. It was originally placed on the old Holcombe dam and was known to generations of lumberjacks who drove logs down the Chippewa river.

A flood about 1880 swept the Holcombe Indian down to Jim Falls before it was recovered and replaced. When the dam was abandoned the figure was removed to the Holcombe town hall and later to an enclosure on the river bank.

In 1950 the weathered and historic figure will be placed in a glass enclosed niche in the new hydroelectric plant.

Lee Theatre's local Green Sox lost to Buena Vista Saturday, 10 to 6 and dropped to third place in the league.

Roanoke's league leaders came to Appomattox Tuesday night and went down 4 to 2 before the fine pitching of Robert Toney. This put Appomattox a game and a half out of first place. Sc. Clair hit a home run for Appomattox in the first inning.

Town Election Will Be Held Next Tuesday

A spirited election campaign will end here next Tuesday, June 14th, when voters of the Town of Appomattox will select a mayor and six members of the Town Council.

Candidates are:

For Mayor: G. B. Buchanan

For Town Council:
Charles F. James
J. E. Jamerson
C. K. Hunter
C. S. Jenkins
David T. Robertson
J. H. Lucads
John Curtis Caldwell
Mrs. Ryland M. Mann
F. L. Murphy
J. T. Almond
C. T. Moses, Jr.
Ivey Holland.

The new officers will assume their duties and serve two-year terms.

Activity by the candidates has included a series of letters appealing for support, and personal solicitation. There are approximately 350 eligible voters in this election, and due to the councilmatic contest it is likely that from 275 to 300 votes will be cast. This would be heavier than in normal town elections here.

Also to be voted on at the same election is the proposed $80,000 bond issue for the purchase and the expansion of the privately owned town water system. The town has an option to purchase the water system and will do immediately after the election if the voters approve the issuance of the bonds.

One of the main purposes of the planned program of expanding the water system is to provide increased water pressure for the plant of the Appomattox Garment Company on Route 460. The plant represents the community's largest pay roll, and plans are in readiness for its expansion. It is understood that the Garment Company expects to start work on an additional building as soon as assured of adequate water pressure to supply a modern sprinkler system for fire protection. This expansion will probably result in an increase in number of employees.

The town has stated that the proposed bonds can and will be retired with no increase in the present tax rate structure.

SELECTED CATTLE FOR BREEDING ABILITIES

Selected native and Montana western yearling ewes consistently topped native commercial ewes in breeding abilities in a recent series of tests at Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station.

The native commercial ewes, explains Dr. C. M. Kincaid, animal husbandman for the Station, were those commonly available on Virginia markets. Most of them were late lambs.
